PRESIDENT'S FOREWORD SR GARY NINGKAN

Greetings fellow Members!

Free Life Membership Registration Campaign (Dayak Graduates Below 40 Years Old)

As of March 2022, less than 30% of existing members of SDGA were below 40 years of age. To expand the pool of talents to ensure sustainability of the Association, it was unanimously agreed that the membership registration fee to be waived from 1st March to 31st October 2022 for Dayak Graduates below age 40.

Today, we have registered more than 450 new members below age 40, thus bringing the percentage of members below 40 years old to approximately 40%. Let's spread the words and get more young Dayak Graduates to join us and contribute back to the community.

SDGA Education Fair 2022

We organised our inaugural Education Fair at UCSI Hotel on 14 & 15 March 2022. The fair was held to create a platform for students who have not decided on a course or a university to speak to university representatives to help chart their educational journey. We would like to thank our main partner – UCSI Hotel, and participating institutions namely UNIMAS Business School, Cyberjaya College Kuching, Open University Malaysia (OUM), Sunway College Kuching, University Teknologi MARA (UiTM), SEGI College Sarawak, Swinburne University, Yayasan Sarawak, UTS & UCSI University.

The committee is currently planning for its next iteration slated for September 2022.

Randau Blockchain

SDGA also held its inaugural Randau session at INVENT Space on 18 June 2022. The topic of the Randau was on fundamentals and basic applications of Blockchain technology.

The Randau was attended by our fellow Member, YB Kennedy Chuk Pai (ADUN Murum) and over 30 other participants from SDGA, Sarawak E-Sports Association (SEA), Sarawak Entrepreneurs Association (SEA), DUBS, and Sarawak Society for the Deaf.

Our matter experts and guest speakers were Mr Amarjit Singh (CEO of Blockchain Academy Malaysia) and Mr Parssanth Navaratnam of Pandolab.

The setup of the Randau was inspired by "branchau tikai" and "berandau" concept in the Ruai of a proper traditional longhouse, brought into a modern setting at INVENT Space.

We thank all participants and Cybertech our program partner, and watch this space for its continuation.

I would like to take this opportunity to wish everyone Selamat Nyambut Hari Gawai Dayak 2022 Gayu Guru Gerai Nyamai Lantang Senang Nguan Menoa, and Blessed Sarawak Day 2022.

God bless Sarawak. Stay safe everyone.

IMPLEMENTATION OF MINIMUM WAGE ORDER OF RM1,500.

by Sabestiano Mike Atet

Minimum wage of RM1,500 per month has been effectively implemented on 1st May 2022 after Minimum Wage Order (MWO) 2022 was gazetted on 27th April 2022. In fact, the minimum wage must be revised every two years in accordance with the provision stipulated in National Wages Consultative Council Act 2011. It is definitely a positive development but the implementation to increase the minimum wage has received mixed responses from various parties. There are advantages and disadvantages depending on the perspective that we are looking at.

From macroeconomic perspective, an increase of minimum wage will increase a disposable income especially for low-income workers which results in more spending or consumption in the economy. Previously, there was a study by Bank Negara Malaysia (BNM) on the Marginal Propensity to Consume (MPC) across Household Income Groups. MPC refers to the tendency of an individual to spend extra income towards consumption rather than saving it. Based on the study, the MPC for low-income households is higher than that for high-income households. Since Malaysia economy is mainly driven by the private consumption, more spending by the households due to increase in disposable income will ensure the economic growth is intact.

In term of labour utilization in the economy, it is expected that the minimum wage policy will maximize the labour participation rate in the economy. With minimum wage in place and to be gradually increased based on the MWO determined by the government, the workforce will perceive it as a better incentive to take part in the labour market. With regards to wage growth, most of the time there will be an argument on why the wage level is quite stagnant or increases at slower rate when the productivity as a whole is growing faster? As highlighted by BNM annual report previously, wages in Malaysia have recorded a slower growth compared to labour productivity growth. There is a possible mismatch between labour productivity and wage level, but this requires close examination within the economic sector to identify the gap.

Due to higher prices of goods and services, inflation has become a hot topic nowadays. From the perspective of workers especially those who are in low-income group, an increase is needed to offset the rise in the cost of living. There is an argument saying that "with RM1,500 as minimum wage but with everything else getting more expensive, nothing is solved. It's just going back to square one". At macro level, this is somewhat true but one must remember that an inflation will always present in the economy and if it is not compensated by an increase in wages, workers will the low-wage be more financially stressed. It may not increase the purchasing power but think of the increment of minimum wage as a financial relief so that the economic welfare of low-income workers can be maintained, to say the least.

Since Malaysia economy is still in the midst of recovering from prior economic contraction due to COVID-19 pandemic in 2020, an increase of minimum wage to RM1,500 is not well-received by most of the business players, particularly from small and medium-sized enterprises (SMEs). They argue that many businesses have yet to fully recover to prepandemic level and the sudden increase in minimum wage during challenging situation the potentially dampen economic can The increase recovery. from previous minimum wage of RM1,200 represents a 25% hike in labour cost for minimum-wage workers in which it translates to higher operating cost for doing a business and will eat up the profit margin. Most industries were badly affected by COVID-19 pandemic and therefore, the latest MWO at this juncture may compromise an effort to revive the businesses.

Depending on the employers' ability to cope with increasing cost, there is a concern that the employers may opt to freeze the job recruitment and downsize the existing workforce. In other words, an unemployment rate might increase. When the first minimum wage was implemented on 1st January 2013, BNM suggested that the impact of the minimum wage policy will be manageable and further indicated that it would have small negative effect on employment. Given prevailing economic condition, however, the magnitude of the effect may vary considering global pressing issues such as previous COVID-19 lockdown. Russia-Ukraine conflict and inflationary pressure which are totally different from a decade ago. There is still a risk of lower employment though it is believed that the effect will be transitory.

While the minimum wage policy has undesirable effect on the employers, it may incentivize them to provide additional trainings to upskill and enhance the productivity of the employees. The companies may be encouraged to invest their capital in new technologies and shift towards automation to upgrade the production capacity, rather than rely on low-cost foreign labour. With the productivity-enhancing measures in place, the companies can be more competitive and these changes would promote the transformation of Malaysia into a high value-added, high-income economy. In simple economic understanding, the increase in minimum wage should be linked with an increase in productivity. Hence, required measures to enhance the productivity is crucial to sustain the business competitiveness and does not affect the growth potential even if the minimum wage is increase from time to time.

Depending on the employers' ability to cope with increasing cost, there is a concern that the employers may opt to freeze the job recruitment and downsize the existing workforce. In other words, an unemployment rate might increase. When the first minimum wage was implemented on 1st January 2013, BNM suggested that the impact of the minimum wage policy will be manageable and further indicated that it would have small negative effect on employment. Short-term perspective, the companies are highly likely to operate at higher costs when there is an increase of minimum wage, especially for the companies within the industry that have been largely dependent on low-income workers. For immediate response and to sustain the business, the companies will need to consider possible means either to have cost-passing or cost-cutting measure. Over the medium and long term, generally higher minimum wage (translates to higher disposable income) is expected to have a positive impact on Malaysia economy. Apart from encouraging better wage structure, both government and industry players should also focus on improving the labour productivity so that it can correspond with the increment of wage. A relatively lower productivity growth in relation to wage growth will threaten a business growth and job creation, thus limiting or reducing the level of business competitiveness.
